Usually held in Washington, D.C. in the late summer, the Interagency Depository Seminar is a wonderful opportunity to see how Federal agencies work in conjunction with Federal depository libraries. The seminar is targeted for new and experienced documents staff. Presentations on training and updates on the latest information products and activites as they relate to Federal depository libraries are given by representatives from various Federal agency representatives. This is a great networking opportunity as well as an opportunity to gather ideas to implement for the improvement of your library.

Registration, hotel reservation information, announcements and updates regarding the Interagency Depository Seminar are found here on the Desktop via FDLP Event News, RSS feeds, and FDLP-L.
