10:30	Plenary Council Session: Digital Distribution - Ted Priebe, Director, Library Planning and Development, GPO, Facilitator	Ticon/York/VForge

In the digital information age, distribution of FDLP publications in intangible, digital form to Federal depository libraries is an evolutionary step in transforming the 20th century model of distributing tangible publications. Over time, as information delivery technologies have advanced, GPO has offered depository libraries additional choices in format.

At present, some depository libraries download digital files from GPO Access or use GPO assigned PURLS to identify and obtain files for local storage and public access. GPO expects to continue to offer this capability for libraries (and others) to download digital files for local use, but we are also seeking information that will help us develop more specific FDsys requirements for affirmative distribution of published digital content.
